Brief Course Description

This course introduces students to the importance of understanding social problems, such as crime, in social context. It addresses key questions about the society we live in and provides a critical analysis of the ways in which social problems become defined. This includes an exploration of the combination of objective and subjective criteria that vary across societies, among individuals and groups in society, and across historical time periods. In so doing, it will demonstrate that social problems may be seen as socially and historically constructed categories. Students will be introduced to different ways of thinking about social problems and these different perspectives will be applied to a variety of social concerns (for example, illegal drug use, domestic violence, terrorism, environmental pollution). Students will develop skills in understanding and analysing a range of concepts, theories and perspectives on social life. A key objective is to foster a critical and interpretive understanding of the dynamic relationship between the individual and society.

Rationale

The design of this course creates opportunities for students to explore some of the underlying reasons, theories and explanations of social problems. The course provides critical engagement with literature and theory that aims to understand the complex relationship between social problems and societal arrangements. Students will explore key sociological theories and approaches which they will be able to use in further study in criminology.

Aims

This course aims to introduce students to the broad spectrum of social theory and emphasises critical analysis of established theories that explain human experience. The course is divided into four parts. Part 1 (weeks 1-4) introduces the central themes and concerns that define ways of thinking about social problems. It explores competing definitions of social problems and outlines the major theoretical perspectives employed by sociologists to understand social life and problems in the social world. Part 2 (weeks 5-7) focuses on, and attempts to explain, the social problems that people experience in their day-to-day lives. This includes, problems of health and well-being, family problems and the so-called 'problem of crime'. Part 3 (weeks 8-10) explores social inequalities, examining how inequality pervades the social world and how this has an impact on people's lives. Part 4 (weeks 11-12) explores the nature of social change in the 'global village'. It examines how and why our world is changing so rapidly and considers the implications of this for the future. Globalisation has complex consequences and the course will conclude with a critical consideration of how the sweeping forces of globalisation affect our everyday lives, for better or worse.

Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this course you will be able to:

1. Demonstrate an understanding of key concepts in sociology and the study of social problems
2. Apply these concepts and perspectives to an analysis of social problems in everyday life, problems of social inequality and problems associated with globalisation.

3. Demonstrate how a sociological imagination might be applied to key concerns within criminology and criminal justice
4. Provide evidence of effective research and information searching skills
5. Present work clearly in accordance with appropriate academic standards
6. Undertake positive and productive study skills and effective time management

Texts and Supporting Materials

Lecture notes, notices and other issues relating to the course will be made available through the QIBT portal.

Recommended Textbook & Resources:

Bessant, J and Watts, R (2007). Sociology Australia, 3rd edition. Crows Nest, NSW: Allen and Unwin.

Organisation and Teaching Strategies

Each week, you are required to attend 3 hours of contact time in class consisting of lectures, and tutorials. To achieve the course objectives, a lecture complemented by the required text will deliver the primary course content. The lecture will develop your understanding of the topics covered within the course. The tutorials are oriented towards solving problems that are related to concepts and issues that have been introduced in lectures and the required reading. The tutorial will also provide you with the opportunity to ask any unresolved questions and develop a solid foundation for understanding the lecture, textbook and other material.

Class Contact Summary

Attendance:

Your attendance in class will be marked twice during a four hour class. To receive full attendance, you must be present in the classroom on both occasions.

Program Progression:

You are reminded that satisfactory Program Progression requires that attendance in classes is maintained at equal to or greater than 80%, and that GPA is maintained at equal to or greater than 3.5 [please see QIBT Policy Library - Program Progression Policy - for more information].

Lecture Notes & Course Materials:

You are required to bring a copy of the lecture notes printed from the QIBT website and any other required course materials to classes each week.

Independent Study:

You are expected to reinforce your learning gained during class time by undertaking sufficient independent study. For this 10 CP course, you will need to spend at least 10 hours per week engaged in activities that will help your learning and fulfil the course objectives. Thus, provided you have well used the 4 hours per week of formal contact, you would then complete at least 6 hours per week of independent study.

The exam contains four (4) sections corresponding to the four Parts of the course. A choice of questions is provided in each section. Students are to answer one question from each section. Students usually write between one to two pages per question. Each answer is marked out of 10 marks (total of 40).

Submission and Return of Assessment Items

End of Semester Exam will be held in week 14, and results posted to the QIBT portal in the week following exam week.

Retention of Originals

You must be able to produce a copy of all work submitted if so requested. Copies should be retained until after the release of final results for the course.

- When two public holidays (e.g. Easter), fall immediately before or after, or one day either side of a weekend, the four days will count as two days in calculating the penalty for late submission.
- When a single public holiday falls mid-week, the day will not be counted towards the calculation of a penalty.

Please refer to the QIBT website - Policy Library > Assessment Policy for guidelines and penalties for late submission.

Academic Integrity

QIBT is committed to maintaining high academic standards to protect the value of its qualifications. Academic integrity means acting with the values of honesty, trust, fairness, respect and responsibility in learning, teaching and research. It is important for students, teachers, researchers and all staff to act in an honest way, be responsible for their actions, and show fairness in every part of their work. Academic integrity is important for an individual's and the College's reputation.

All staff and students of the College are responsible for academic integrity. As a student, you are expected to conduct your studies honestly, ethically and in accordance with accepted standards of academic conduct. Any form of academic conduct that is contrary to these standards is considered a breach of academic integrity and is unacceptable.

Some students deliberately breach academic integrity standards with intent to deceive. This conscious, pre-meditated form of cheating is considered to be one of the most serious forms of fraudulent academic behaviour, for which the College has zero tolerance and for which penalties, including exclusion from the College, will be applied.

However, QIBT also recognises many students breach academic integrity standards without intent to deceive. In these cases, students may be required to undertake additional educational activities to remediate their behaviour and may also be provided appropriate advice by academic staff.

As you undertake your studies at QIBT, your lecturers, tutors and academic advisors will provide you with guidance to understand and maintain academic integrity, however, it is also your responsibility to seek out guidance if and when you are unsure about appropriate academic conduct.

Please ensure that you are familiar with the QIBT Academic Integrity Policy; this policy provides an overview of some of the behaviours that are considered breaches of academic integrity, as well as the penalties and processes involved when a breach is identified.

For further information please refer to the Academic Integrity Policy on the QIBT website – Policy Library.
