Brief Course Description

Screen Analysis I is a 10 Credit Point course situated within the first semester of the Diploma of Arts and Communication. The Diploma of Arts and Communication is designed to provide students with a pathway to:

- further university studies in the Media and Communication disciplines, or
- direct employment.

The course focuses on textual analysis of film and screen. The course develops the concept of textual analysis through a consideration of a range of explanatory specific film texts. The course works through the issues of film form and film style. Film form explores the concepts of narrative and narration as structuring principles in film texts. Film style explores the issues of mise en scene, cinematography, editing and sound in film.

Rationale

Screen Analysis enables the learner to develop skills and knowledge of analysis and critical discussion of film as well as the ability to understand some of the main scholarly, theoretical and critical approaches that have developed in the academic disciplines of screen studies. Such knowledge and skills are foundational to further studies in screen studies and production.

Aims

The course aims to develop skills in the area of textual analysis, historical knowledge and critical as well as theoretical methods. A chronological history of cinema is not offered: films are selected for study because they exemplify particular themes and approaches.

The course also aims to encourage students to develop the following skills as they relate to screen: oral, written and visual communication skills, critical judgment, informed independence of thought, and the ability to conduct research.

Learning Outcomes

After successfully completing this course you should:

1. be able to recognise a range of choices relating to narrative, mise en scene, editing and sound that together make up the style of particular films;
 2. have acquired the appropriate vocabulary to describe the stylistic features of particular texts;
 3. be able to analyse audio-visual texts in terms of the meanings and effects produced by the technical choices embodied in them;
 4. be able to analyse texts in terms of the specific meanings and effects produced by their overall organization and techniques of narration;
 5. be able to recognise and identify the various techniques used in screen performance;
 6. be aware of some of the issues that have been raised by film theorists and critics around the standard forms of textual organization and characterisation.

Organisation and Teaching Strategies

This course is taught through screenings, lectures and tutorials. Screenings offer students examples of the films that exemplify particular themes and approaches, as well as providing common material for discussion and appreciation. Lectures articulate the structure and central concerns of the course. Tutorials are a forum in which students are encouraged to discuss the designated reading materials, issues and approaches raised in the lecture and most importantly the films themselves.

Class Contact Summary

Classes for Screen Analysis include the following:

- Lectures: 2 hours per week (week 1 "" 12)
- Tutorials/Workshops: 1 - 2 hours per week (week 1 "" 13)
- Screenings: 3 hours per week (week 1 "" 12)

Attendance

100% attendance is expected for all classes. You are reminded that your attendance in class will be marked for all elements. To receive full attendance, you must be present in the classroom on all occasions.

You are expected to bring work done at home to class for group and individual discussion. Further development of ideas is expected during tutorial time.

Preparation and Participation in Class

You are expected to read your text book and the lecture notes plus attempt any tutorial/workshop exercises before class so that each week you can actively contribute to your learning and the learning of others in your classes. You are expected to ask and answer questions and to initiate discussions and stimulate debate in group and class situations.

Consultation Times

Attendance during consultation times is optional but you are encouraged to use this extra help to improve your learning outcomes.

Course Materials

Lecture notes will be made available to you on the Learning @ Griffith College website and you are advised to print these out and bring them to each class so that extra notes can be added.

Independent Study

Independent study requires that you spend time outside classes engaged in research necessary to complete your assignments. Research includes reading the required text books, using library and internet facilities. For this 10 CP course, you will need to spend at least 10 hours per week engaged in activities that will help your learning and fulfil the course objectives. Thus, provided you have well used the formal contact hours each week, you would then complete any remaining hours engaged in independent study.

Program Progression

You are reminded that satisfactory Program Progression requires that attendance in classes is maintained at equal to or greater than 80%, and that GPA is maintained at equal to or greater than 3.5 in any semester [please see Griffith College Policy Library - Program Progression Policy - for more information].
